Quarter of a million NHS professionals to benefit from access to online resources

257,000 NHS professionals will benefit from easy access to online resources – anywhere, anytime – to keep up to date with the latest medical advancements.

Eduserv has signed a five-year agreement with the NHS Institute for Innovation and Improvement (NIII) for the provision of single sign-on access to online information resources.

Athens, the widely-used access and identity management service, is the chosen method of giving health professionals and researchers controlled access to materials provided by the NIII in the NHS National Library for Health (NLH) portal (www.library.nhs.uk). The NLH contains 1,780 full-text journals, ten key clinical databases and 500 eBooks that are critical in keeping health professionals informed of the latest developments in their fields.

The NLH portal uses Athens to identify users' organisational affiliations, automatically enabling searches across all of the resources that they are entitled to access. This enables the search to go beyond the resources funded by the NIII, providing access to journals and databases subscribed to by the user's own NHS trust, leading open-access journals and local and national news items through a single interface. The portal, facilitated by Athens, can save the searches and settings of individual users. This means that, every time a user logs on, the portal is customised according to the individual's saved preferences. This helps NHS professionals to find the information they need as quickly as possible.

Ian McKinnell, technical manager at National Library for Health, comments:

'To enable the better use of evidence and enable improvements in safer health care, it is vital that NHS managers and clinicians have ready and reliable access to knowledge. Establishing a knowledge sign-on is a vital foundation to this objective.'

'We are delighted to award this contract to Eduserv and look forward to building on the team's expertise in the field of access and identity management, and experience of working with both higher education and the NHS. NLH will be working with Eduserv and NLH partners in the National Programme for IT and Higher Education. They will ensure that NLH migrates to an open standards platform for access management, ensuring better inter-operability between NHS clinical applications, knowledge resources and learning within HE.'

Meeting the challenges of the future

Eduserv's annual DSP seminar in November attracted around 50 delegates. The event focused on emerging technologies and standards.

The programme of presentations and interactive workshops included a thought-provoking presentation from Steve Plank, Identity Architect at Microsoft UK, entitled OpenAthens and User Centric Identity Management.

Eduserv introduced OpenAthens SP, a new platform that enables Service Providers to adopt new standards easily and take advantage of new developments in order to gain access to new customers. All of the presentations are available online at <http://www.eduserv.org.uk/events/dsp%20seminar%20oct07>

The seminar was well received with 100% of the delegates rating the event and speakers as good or excellent. Daniel Griffin from IWR summarised the day in the IWR blog. See <http://blog.iwr.co.uk/2007/10/athens-is-still.html>

Online Information 2007

We're exhibiting at Online Information 2007 (stand 430) and will be happy to answer your questions on AIM.

We look forward to seeing you. Olympia, London, 4th-6th December 2007. <http://www.online-information.co.uk>

Tailor MyAthens more easily

Eduserv has launched a new release of MyAthens, the widely adopted portal for Athens users. Now organisations and their users can tailor the system more easily to their own specific requirements.

The new release enables organisations to provide a tailored starting place for their users to search electronic subscription services. It also allows organisations to display their logo on the home page, as well as panels that can include:

- Local news items;
- Links to local and other non-Athens resources;
- RSS feeds.

Athens administrators are able to configure a default view for all their users, add/remove panels with content of their choice, and determine which panels are mandatory and which can be closed by their users. Athens users can customise their homepage by moving content panels on the screen, minimising them or closing them.

Additional panels will be released in the future. For example Eduserv are currently working on a Forums section, and are investigating ways of providing a cross searching facility for resources.

Screenshots of the new MyAthens can be seen at http://www.athensams.net/upload/athens/images/myathens_portal.gif

Join the Federation and participate now with OpenAthens

OpenAthens is a framework of software and services that gives institutions supported membership of the UK Access Management Federation. It enables institutions to participate in the Federation now whilst continuing to enjoy the reliability, user-friendliness and administrator support associated with the current Athens service.

OpenAthens provides seamless access to Shibboleth-protected resources in the Federation. Until July 2008, OpenAthens is free to UK Universities and Colleges. From Aug 2008 it is available for a fixed annual subscription. For many institutions, this is the most cost-effective route to active Federation membership.

Over 60 institutions have now confirmed their intent to join the Federation and participate with OpenAthens. To find out how to join the Federation using OpenAthens, see <http://www.athensams.net/federations/openathens> or email federation.liaison@eduserv.org.uk
